On motion by Mr. Lawrenson, a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a committee of four members, one from each district, to confer with the Mayor upon the expediency and practicability of establishing a high school for each sex, competent to commence with twentyfive scholars in each department; also, to examine the expenditures for the last year, and ascertain whether or not, by a greater degree of economy or other means not letrimental to the primary schools, any portion of such fund as may be required for a high school could be obtained; the committee to report at the next meeting of the Board.

The CHAIR appointed Messrs. Lawrenson, Stoughton, Valsh, and Whyte as said committee.

The Board proceeded to the election of a President pro empore, on motion of Mr. ArLen; and the ballots having been received and counted, it appeared that Wn. B. Ran-DOLPH, of the first district, was unanimously re-elected. On taking the chair, Colonel RANDOLPH returned his hanks for the honor conferred upon him in a few pertient remarks.

On motion by Mr. ArLEE, the thanks of the board vere unanimously tendered to the Mayor for his services in organizing the board, and the desire was expressed that he would hereafter exhibit the same zeal he had heretofore evinced in behalf of the public schools. The Mayor replied as follows: Mr. President and gentlemen of the Board of Trustees: For the very high honor which this expression of your feelings towards me evinces you have the acknowledg-ments of a grateful heart. It is true that I feel a deep ad abiding interest in the success of public education in the city of Washington; and the only regret that I realthe city of Washington; and the only regret that I realize is that my ability is not equal to my desire to promote an object which, in my judgment, lies at the very foundation of, and which will contribute more greatly than any other to perpetuate, the glorious institutions under which we live. It is only within a few days past, Mr. President, that this matter has been brought directly and particularly to my attention, and I have had recourse to a very limited number of books treating of the subject of public education throughout the United States; and if I had ever before entertained a doubt of its ereat of public education throughout the United States; and if I had ever before entertained a doubt of its great advantage to society, those doubts would have disappeared before the abundant facts that were developed upon the mere cursory examination of some reports in which the matter was set forth by those under whose charge the public education in some of our cities has been placed. I am indebted for information, pointing to the extreme southern portion of our confederacy, to a gentleman of acknowledged genius and ripe learning, and who has devoted a large portion of his earlier life (being still a young man) to the cause of public education in the State of Louisiana—I allude to Professor Dimitry, at present a translator in the Department of State; and I was struck with this remarkable fact, that while in the great centre of our common country and ever-glorious Union we should expect to find the public schools in the full tide of successful operation, I am constrained to say that I have to admit the superiority in this respect of the South on the one hand and the extreme North upon the other. The city of New Orleans, containing a transient and permanent population not exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand at any period of the year, contributes to the cause of public education the sum of $165,000, while the pro-rota sum given by the State swells that amount beyond two hundred thousand dollars. And I am told that a like filteral expenditure for public education exists in the city of Charleston, another great southern city. Look at New England, and you will find similar expenditures on a liberal scale in Roston and in Hartford; and even in the little town of Norwich—a small country village, emphatically a New England villago—the annual expenditure for public education is $40,000. Look at the great commercial emporium of the country, the city of New York, and you will find their expenditures for this purnd if I had ever before entertained a doubt of its gree commercial emporium of the country, the city of New York, and you will find their expenditures for this pur-pose exceed one million of dollars a year; in Philadel-phia they are more than half a million; and in Baltiphia they are more than half a million; and in Baltimore, with a population of 230,000, they are nearly a quarter of a million. But when we come to the city of Washington, a city that should be distinguished for all that belongs to the higher branches of learning and literature, with a population of 70,000, our expenditure amounts to the very inconsiderable sum of twenty-two or twenty-three thousand dollars a year—ix or seven thousand of which arises from the annual payment which her voters make in order to exercise the elective franchise. It does seen to me Mr.

exercise the elective franchise. It does seem to me, Mr. President and gentlemen, that it is only necessary to direct public attention to this subject. This should not only be the model city of a model republic, but here should be found the model schools of a model republic; and I trust the day is not far distant when that condition of things will be brought about. In all your efforts to sured that, whether in public or private life, you shall at all times and under all circumstances have my cordial and carnest co-operation.

They might not hope for wealth, but a richer treasure would be theirs—the undying gratitude of the relieved and the restored. They might not look for rule in a political arena, but they would reign supreme in the hearts of grateful hundreds. The hus nd, bending over the pale form of his suffering wife will bless him as he saw the rose returning to her cheek; the young mother, watching the tender rose-bud nestling upon her bosom, will, as disease is driven away by hand of skill, pour forth words of sweeter to human ears than the shout of triumph of songs of victory. Wherever the pale flend Disease winds its slimy form there must the true physician be found. There lies a city robed in beauty, its waters dotted with white-winged messengers of commerce; busy crowds throng the streets and the merry laugh of childhood rings sweetly upon the air ; but already is gaunt Pestilence whetting his glittering sword for the throats of its victims. Onward it comes, leaving a dark train of woe behind; a murky orror pervades the atmosphere as its dark waves dash over bleeding hearts and crushed hopes. Who are they? Physicians, noble hearts who have left the comforts of home, to brave the fierce plague on its own battle ground. Medicine has its martyrs as well as its heroes. When amidst the roar and din of bursting artillery and the charge of serried columns on the heights of Balaklava, reeking with the blood of the slain as the cry of victory rung out, we had no song of praise, no triumphant shout—but for those self-denyheroes who fell at Norfolk, covered with imperishable glory, we heave a sigh and a tear. The address was listened to with close attention, and was greeted with the unanimous applause of the audience.

More Burglaries .- We learn that the dwelling-house Mrs. Grimes, in the First ward, was entered on Sunday night while the residents were at church, and robbed of some $25 in money.

The bookstore of George E. French, in Alexandria was entered last Friday night, and robbed of gold pens and pencils to the amount of $40, and some $6 in change The entrance was effected by picking the lock of the front door; after which they prized open a glass case containing gold pens, pencils, fine cutlery, &c. They must have been alarmed at something, and hurried away with their booty, leaving behind some $200 worth of fine cutlery, in boxes nearer their hands than the articles stolen.

The cabin of the schooner Mary Francis, lying a Georgetown, was entered on Saturday night and robbed of a watch worth $50, and some $25 in money. House holders should be on their guard, as it is evident that a gang of skilful operators is in our midst.

THE THEATRE. .- The great American comedy of "Extremes," which was so successful last night, will be again presented this evening with a powerful cast, embracing the entire strength of the company. We learn that the President's Mounted Guard, with their staff officers, will visit the theatre to-night, in uniform. A good hous may be expected.

CIRCUIT COURT .- The October term of this Court began yesterday, Judges Morsell and Merrick on the bench. The Court was called, and Judge Morsell announced to the gentlemen of the bar, that, in consequence of a recent affliction in the family of the presiding justice, (Dunlop,) the business of the term would be suspended for a few days. The court was, accordingly, adjourned until next Monday, the 25th inst.

The number of students continues, as in former years, to be limited to as many only as can receive the minute attention of the principal, it being his desire to combine, as far as practicable, the social and moral advantages of a family with the classification and discipline of a school.

The principal brings to his assistance in the pursuit of his profession, the experience of more than twenty years, sturing which time he has been engaged in the instruction of young persons from almost every section of the Union.

Students may prepare themselves at this school for entering any class in college, or for the active business of life.
